

Medical Report for Au Pair Participants

▶ PART 1: JOB DESCRIPTION AND DUTIES

Physician Instructions: Below you will find a general description of the essential duties of an au pair working for a host family in the U.S. Please review this description to inform your recommendation as to whether the candidate before you is, in your judgement, physically, mentally and emotionally capable of performing the requirements of this position.

Position Description:

Physical Demands

- ▶ Lifting: up to 45 lbs. (varies)
- ▶ Frequency of lifting: frequent

Job Duties

The essential functions of the au pair position may include, but are not limited to, supervising and providing full-time care for multiple children of various ages, communicating effectively, and modeling appropriate behavior. Specific tasks will vary from position to position but will likely include, assisting with homework, preparing meals and snacks, bathing and dressing children, changing diapers, organizing activities, and driving in an automobile with children.

Working Conditions

- ▶ Au pairs will be working closely with children at various stages of their emotional and physical development.
- ▶ The duties and responsibilities are generally performed in the host family home in the United States. The au pair will also reside in this home during off-duty hours.
- ▶ Au pairs may be required to work long hours with little opportunity for a break. This can be up to a maximum of 10 hours a day and 45 hours per week.
- ▶ Certain duties and responsibilities may also have to be performed outside of the home environment in hot and cold weather conditions as necessary.

Physical requirements: The au pair role may involve performing physical tasks such as lifting, carrying and repositioning children; carrying children up and down stairs; and carrying children's equipment such as strollers and car seats. An au pair must possess a level of physical stamina and strength sufficient to comfortably and safely perform these required tasks.

Emotional strength: Childcare duties can be very stressful so the candidate should be emotionally capable of spending long periods of time in demanding conditions. Au pairs must possess patience, dependability, and good communication and interpersonal skills. Au pairs must possess the confidence to occupy a leadership position in the home. They must be able to show sensitivity and be capable of dealing calmly and effectively with unexpected events and behaviors.

▶ PART 2: MEDICAL CONDITIONS

We have included as a courtesy a checklist of conditions which may impact the candidate's ability to perform the essential duties of the au pair position; however, this list is not exhaustive, and we defer to your professional expertise in conducting a thorough assessment of the candidate's capabilities.

Please evaluate any physical, mental or emotional issues that may interfere with the performance of these job duties listed in Part 1.
